The Lake House by Kate Morton #BookReview #HistoricalFiction #Mystery.

Kate Morton's book evokes a feeling of timelessness. Like Alice in Wonderland, one just falls into the story. She's one author who is always managed to make me forget myself. The Lake House is a beautiful work of fiction, her writing skills are amazing of which there's no doubt, the house called Loanneth comes to life in our eyes. This again is a book that cannot be rushed, it should be read at a leisure, things happen in a very slow pace so much that by the end I was so impatient to skip pages. Each and every character in this book have been sketched beautifully and the Edevane sisters are a joy to read about. Every mystery does get solved by the end with a neat bow sometimes a little too conveniently but it was beautifully done.

Living on her family's idyllic lakeside estate in Cornwall, England, Alice Edevane is a bright, inquisitive, innocent, and precociously talented sixteen-year-old who loves to write stories. But the mysteries she pens are no match for the one her family is about to endure...

One midsummer's eve, after a beautiful party drawing hundreds of guests to the estate has ended, the Edevanes discover that their youngest child, eleven-month-old Theo, has vanished without a trace. What follows is a tragedy that tears the family apart in ways they never imagined.

Decades later, Alice is living in London, having enjoyed a long successful career as an author. Theo's case has never been solved, though Alice still harbors a suspicion as to the culprit. Miles away, Sadie Sparrow, a young detective in the London police force, is staying at her grandfather's house in Cornwall. While out walking one day, she stumbles upon the old estate—now crumbling and covered with vines, clearly abandoned long ago. Her curiosity is sparked, setting off a series of events that will bring her and Alice together and reveal shocking truths about a past long gone...yet more present than ever.

Review: The Lake House by Kate Morton.

The bestselling storyteller Kate Morton, author of The House at Riverton, is at her finest with this mystery set in Cornwall in the 1930s.

Kate Morton burst onto the literary scene in 2007 with The House at Riverton, which rapidly became a bestseller across the globe. Her latest novel, The Lake House, is similar in both tone and style to her debut—featuring the sort of expansive, absorbing, heart-wrenching story that is swiftly becoming the trademark of this Australian author.

The Lake House opens with focus on the stern yet sympathetic character, Alice Edevane. A successful and elderly crime author, many of her books draw inspiration from her own real-life tragic history: her baby brother Theo went missing from his crib when Alice was just a teenager, and the mystery has remained unsolved for decades.

Enter detective Sadie Sparrow. Wrestling with her own demons and on enforced professional leave, she comes across Theo's case—and makes it her mission to uncover the truth.

"Morton's writing style is typically unhurried, and the story's many threads take almost 600 pages to come together, but at no point does it feel as if it's dragging."

Split-time frame tales are a common framework for this decade's popular fiction, and Morton pulls it off with real aplomb. In The Lake House, she jumps effortlessly from 1930s and present-day Cornwall and London, gradually pulling the strands of the story together in an almost painterly fashion.

Morton's elements of mystery are always tightly-wound and expertly plotted—she remains one step ahead of the reader at all times, giving just enough to keep them guessing without ever revealing too much to lose the intrigue.

Any fan of Morton's works (The Lake House is her fifth) will know that she gives her characters a rich emotional life. Love in its various forms is always a driving force of the narrative and as the reader, you're given access to more than one character's inner-most thoughts. Writing about characters' affections is an effective way of winning those of the reader—a few chapters in and you're captivated, empathetic and emotionally invested.
